Sarah Pérez-Kriz (Ph.D. University of California, Santa Barbara) is an interdisciplinary scholar whose research interests center around learning in formal and informal environments. She earned her Ph.D. in cognitive psychology in 2006, and has spent more than 10 years conducting research on multimedia learning, the role of graphics in STEM education, and the intersection of technology, science fiction, and society. Currently, Pérez-Kriz serves as the Director of the Office of Undergraduate Research at the University of San Diego. Prior to her position at the University of San Diego, she was an assistant professor in the College of Engineering at the University of Washington.